Before she was despatched, she made a tris! trip to the Kusla, and her machinery then seemed to be in fair order. Now that there is no steamer to call at Pahang from Singspore during this morsoon, it would be very desirable if the Sinyum were to resume her bi-monthly runs to Kunla Tiple, as it is now by the overland route via S-langor that we must expect to receive mails from Sing spore.

THIS afternoon Mr. H. E. Wadehouse, at the Magistracy, held an inquity into the circumstances under which a little boy was drowned two days ago at No. 3, Western Street. It transpired in evidence that the mether of the child, which was only two years of age, went out to make a purchase leaving her son and heir playing in the passage. During her absence, the boy went into the cookhouse, and had, apparently, been endeavouring to get hold of a cup in a bucket of water. He must have overbalanced and fallen head foremost into the bucket, for he was found in that position a few minutes later by a little girl. An attempt was made to save the child's life, but the effort was upavailing. A verdict of " accidental drowning " was returned.

SEVERAL attempts have lately been made by labor organizations of the Dominion of Canada to induce the Government to impose further restrictions on Chinese immigration. The Government has just passed an order in Council which practically settles its policy in that regard. The order, siter reciting the circumstances which called it forth and mentioning that it is impossible to take any action infringing treaty rights, says : "In view of the commercial relations of Canada with China it is not expedient to charge the provisions of the Chinese Immigration Act, nor take any action that might be considered by the Chinese Government as an invasion of the spirit of treaty obligations or as an unfriendly act. It is deemed impolitic and unnecessary to recommend the alternative expedient of raising the tax to $400. The sugrestion that every Chinaman or Chinawoman in Canada be taxed to the amount of $200 each year and said tax be paid into the treasury of the municipality or city in which they may be found is a question for consideration by other than the Government of the Domision,' article appeared in one of our local papers the other day, criticising the exerbitant postul rates charged at this port. The charges here for in the civilized world, and as they certainly cannot be justified, it is to be hoped the Government will at once take steps to reduce such unnecessarily excessive rates. Thirteen cents are charged for a letter we ghing half an ounce to the Continent of Europe or the United States of America; registration to Lisbon is eight cents, whilst to Hongkong, the open ports of China and elsewhere throughout the world it thirteen cents, the equivalent of eighty of those imaginary rais which we hear so much about but which have never been in circulation in this benighted possession of Fair Lusitania.

The question of dredging our harbour has again been allowed to drop into oblivion. There was considerable talk about it in official ci-cles a few months back, after the Hongkong Telegraph's articles on the subject, but as usual here it ended in talk, and perhaps it may be revived in another decade, after we are completely cut off from the outer world!

Piracy has not yet vanished from these waters. On the 15th lost, a Chinese passenger junk, whilst on its ordinary trip to villages in the neighbourhood of, Macao, was attacked and plundered by a gang of pirates, who got off safely with their booty. No arrests have yet been made but, as mentioned above ; the Macao fleet is under orders for target practice off the Nine Islands, and that warlike demonstration may scare away the daring majauders from our perceful shores.

THE OPIUM QUESTION. I-THE CONTENDING FORCES.

When action worthy the name is taken by a Government to suppress or otherwise deal with any alleged social evil. a glanco at the parties who enter into the strife that inevitably ensues reveals three distinct sections-those who range themselves in oppraition to what they assert (but too often fall to prave) to be a crying evil; those who press'for the con incance of the practice or practices, and, thirdly, those who are indifferent, or, being interested, are placed in circumstances admitting of no action on their part in the premises. Now, with regard to the Oalum Question, as with numerous questions that have been dealt with in recent years, the third section interested in the matter is far and of the Occident and Orient, together with the Imperial Government, who are to be affected. injuriously or otherwise, by the outcome of the labours of the Oplum Commission now publicly prosecuting inquiries throughout the Indian. Empire, and secretly investigating the dimensions and effects of the trade in Indian opium throughout the "Gorgeous East." Are the masses, then, throughout the Empire to be ruled as with a rod of iron, and be hushed into silence in this instance, simply because the questions relative to the alleged "baneful" and "ungodly" effects of the trade are to be investigated by an Imperial Commission selected from the two sections who have least to lose whichever way the tide turns? This question of the discontinuance of the optom trade affects. fully 300,000,000 of British-Indians, 10,000 000 of British taxpayers' in the "auld countrie," renally with the taxpayers in British Crown colonies, and tens of millions of Chinese in Far Cathay. It affects millions of British subjects who never touch opium (who don't know what oplum looks like and who have never seen an opium pipe); millions, again, who cultivate people interested in the railways and steamers that transport the drug from the places of production to the markets in various parts of the world; and the Banks which do, a lucrative business in Bills of Exchange connected with the trade in the alleged evil, And yet a wealthy clique of sophistical and blassed critics, not one of whom has the smallest interest in the question except as regards its sentimental aspect, raise their voice in the Imperial Parliament, denounce the trade as a disgrace to the country, claim that Britain forcibly introduced opium in China at the point of the sword, and that but for this enormity the Chinese woold never have known what it was to become addicted to the opium habit. This they claim, and more-they aver that but for the baneful effects of the drug and the hatred engendered by with sympathy. the brutal manner in which it was forced on the Chinese, the way of the Christian infesionary would have been easy and the conversion of millions of Chinese as simple an operation almost as shelling pear ! THE SPECTRE Q.C.

It was very hot, and the diagy, stuffy courtrooms looked even dingler and stuffler than usual. It was a divorce-..itting, and the Court was insuff rably crowded as it always is in divorce sittings. There were the barristers in their wigs looking important; black-eyed, trimbodiced wemen about to face the music as respondents; here and there a handsome, goodfor-nothing, shifty-ryed dandy, about to "perform" as co-respondent; there, was the inevitable perion on the same errand, with the usual prir kling of reposters, b iefless barristers, and baldbeads who always roll up to this kind of entertals ment. One case was just finishing, and when it was concluded and the bustle made by the lawyers and parties engaged in it in leaving the room had subsided, the clerk called the next case ; " + icks v. Hicks !"

O exithe birristers at the table, Mr. Sharp, O C., rose - a stout, red-faced man with a keep i eye and sinly whi kers. "If your Honor pleases, I as per with my friend Mr. Smithers for the petitioner." Mr Smithers being indicated to the court, bowed familiarly-a rising junior with a prejecting chin and a high forehead.

"Any appearance for the respondent?" engulred the clerk. No one answered.

"Any appearance on behalf of William Freeman, co-respondent?" Again no answer.

"Any appearance on behalf of Warburton

"That co-re-pondent is dead, if your Honor pleases," said Mr. Sharp, Q.C. "Even so, replied the Judge, "he must be called, I very co-respondent, whether dead or alive, must be called. Have you an order to dispense with service on him?" But, before Sharp, Q C., could'reply, a strange thing took place. Though the court-door remained closed, a procession of barristers advanced to the lawyers' table. At least, they looked like birristers and wore wigs, but there was a shadowy, unreal look about them; they were clearly not of the earth. More and more they poured in, and though there were certainly thousands of them, the court did not seem crowded. They appeared to occupy no room, although each man was clear and distinct to the vision of all present. Then, too, among them were men of all climes and all nations -aye, and of all periods. There was an old grey-bearded man clad in long, sweeping, Oriental robes that spoke of the earliest times of history. There were black men, yellow men, Egyptians, Tucks, Russians, Indians. With them came a wigle:s fraternity, attorneys and their clerks. At the tail of this singular procession was a modern datedy, smirking, and looking

The leader of this spectral hand advanced to the table, and, bowing to the Judge, remarked, "If your Honor pleases, I appear with my learned friends" (and here the whole ghostly crew bewed to the court) "for the deceased co-respondent, Warburton Dudley," whereupon the individual thus indicated bowed to the court, The Judge was thunderstruck. "It has been suggested to the court that Warburton Dudley is

Joseph, who is described as an Israelit ----"That was only giving him his Jew," intersupted Sharp, Q.C., who was recovering his selfconfidence.

"It is-real-light on the suffect, anyhow," said the Spectre. "This Joseph, I say, was sworn to have been seen in Mrs. Poliphar's room. Poliphar the reupon sued for a divorce. Joseph set up the plea that Mrs. Potiphar was the guilty party. . It was decided-Iam now reading,"said the Spectre, impressively, "from the lidement of Prarach Chief Justice, a very able lawyer-that this amounted to no defence, and the co-respondent was cast in damages and imprisoned. Here is the report." And he handed to his Honor a papyrus manuscript.

The Judge scanned it for a while, and then he said: "This is not a law report; this is a pic'ure book. There's nothing here about Pharaoh, or Potipher either; nothing but pictures."

The Egyptian arose, smiling suavely, "He can explain," said the Spectre Q.C. "He knows all about it." "Well, to begin with," said the Judge. "Here is a picture of a female, in profile, holding the end of the garment of a figure running away." " I hat," sald the Egyptian, " is the statement of the matter at issue between the parties. That symbolises the allegation of the petitioner, Mr. Potiphar, and the explanation given by Joseph." "I see," said the Judge; " and now what's this? The next thing is a picture of a crecodile.

> > "THE ARIZONA KICKER."

During the past year The Kicker has had no less then six different editors of the 'Horse Talk' department. As near as we can semember, one was lynched over in Clinch Valley, one was shot by Colonel Taylor for referring to his theroughbred as a "burro," and the other four threw up the 'sit' without notice and travelled father west to get a change of climate. Last week a dudish young man; wearing eye-glasses, patent leather shees, and a white shirt, came along an applied for the place, and we took him on in the fill expectation of having to foot his funeral and plank down expenses within a week. He went over to Lone Bay last Tuesday to witness the horse sace, and he hadn't cleared the town before we had given an order to Dan Powers, the undertaker, to trim up one of his popular a8-dollar coffins and engage, three backs for a funeral procession. We confess to being powerfully surprised and considerably chagrined when our horse editor walked into the office on Thurs day morning in the best of health. He had not only escaped without a scratch, but during his sojourn at Lone Tree had split Major 'ackson's ear with a builet, bluffed Jim Williams to s standstill, and stood off a gang of sixteen cowboys who objected to his decision in one of the races. We at once jumped his salary to seven dollars per week, and the first time he has to drop a man in self-defence we shall make it eight d livrs. We feel it our duty to warn the public to look out for him. He halis from Boston, and the oldest pioneer in the town would take him for a tenderfoot of the greenest type. He drawls his speech, looks as harmless as a rabbit, and most anyone would figure that he could be scared out of his shoes with one whoop. He deceptive, however. He shoots with both hands, moves like a flash of lightning, and is dangerous man to fool with,

AN EXTRAORDINARY ORDER.

Some weeks ago, when the U.S.S. Atlanta was withdrawn from commission, it was discovered that home of the valves or doors between water-light compartments had become so rusted an odour of sulphur that perfumed the Court for that they would not close, thereby destroying the utility of those compartments. This was, of course, indefensible and involved neglect of the part of some of the officers of the ship, so, to prevent a recurrence of such a condition of things, Mr. Herbert, Secretary of the Navy, formulated a Navy regulation circular, which must be given in full in order that it may be appreclated.

The new regulation, dated September oth, 1803 Pays:-"The executive officer and the senior engineer officer shall inspect weekly, and together, all compariments, double bottoms and mechanical devices for the management and safety of the vessel, and shall make to the captain, after each inspection, separate written reports of the condition of the parts of the ship and of the mechanical devices for which they are specially responsible,"

Commenting on the subject the San Francisco

Chronicle says:-"This order, while all right in theory, is absolutely nonsensical in practice. In a ship like the Orsgon, for example, which is to be launched in a few weeks, a very simple computation will show that if the executive officer and the chief angineer were to start at 6 o'clock on Menday morning to crawl through the waives, doorways, battle batches and all the rest of the passages between the double bottoms and in the wings and sides of the ship, and were to crawl and burrow eight hours a day, they could not complete their labors by Saturday night. This, of couse, excludes any examination of the mechanical devices with which all our new naval vessels are equipped. "There is another phase of this order which will eccur to naval men, though it probably did not to Secretary Herbert. The executive officers and the chief engineers of our new ships of war are, as a sule, men of 50 years of age and upward, and even if they might be willing to spend their time in trawling and creeping through gates and valves and doors below the level of the water their physical condition would forbid it. The Navy Department has no right to demand this kind of labor from men who have grown gray in the service, and who, while thoroughly comretent is their respective positions, are not suited for rat hunts in the double bottoms of our modern ships of war. "If Secretary Herbert is inclined to stand by his order it would be well, possibly, for the President to instruct him to accompany some executive officer and chief engineer on one of these exploring expeditions. We venture to say "There, that's one lie that will stick," said the that the result would be a modification of this extraordinary order just as soon as the Secretary could resume his official position and command the services of his strangrapher and typewriter."
